INTRODUCTION

The writers focus on writing skills as the important competencies in learning English. There are many aspects that can be achieved by students through learning this skill. Students can put their ideas, knowledge, experiences and even feelings. On the other hand there are several aspects that must be learned to master this skill, such as vocabulary, grammar, and ideas. In addition, students must do some exercises through possible sources. One source is the textbook. This can guide students to achieve competence. There are many English textbooks, but not all of them contain what students need. It is the duty of the English teacher to decide which textbook is suitable for her students.

According to Barker (2000: 136), writing is one form of communication that is technically difficult. Writing understanding and good idea of creativity. Although each textbook provides writing activities, there are some materials that are not in accordance with the abilities of students. For example high school material used for Vocational High School, there are different abilities of students understanding the material because in Vocational High School is more focused in practice.

According to Kirby and Crovitz (2013: 12), writing is a very personal and unique human action. Writing is bound to the experience of individual feelings, perceptions, and thoughts bound to the process by which language shapes and imports what we feel, feel, and imagine. Writing arises from acts of creation that are ongoing, never finished, constantly renewed, and always singular.

Writing assignments can make students more diligent in doing the exercises and in mastering the material. In addition, writing assignments are aimed at developing students' ability to think critically. According to Ellis (2003) in Nunan (2004:

3) "the task is a work plan that requires students to process language pragmatically to achieve results that can be evaluated in terms of whether the correct or appropriate proportional content has been delivered". According to Rivers (1993: 240) "writing assignments are the ability to write sentences or paragraphs correctly, such as developing verbally from class situations and the ability to write short, simple letters, etc."

According to Creswell (2007: 37), qualitative research begins with the assumption of the possibility of using theoretical lenses worldwide and studies research problems. According to Diniah (2013: 1), textbooks are an important part of teaching and learning English for teachers and students because they benefit. Richard and Renandya (2002) in Fauziati (2010: 45) state that writing is the most difficult skill to master for foreign language students. This is due not only to the need to generate and organize ideas using appropriate vocabulary, sentence, and paragraph organization choices but also to turn those ideas into readable text.

Writing task consist of three parts, such as: (1) controlled writing also known as guiding writing, focusing on stabilizing grammar patterns, sentence structure, punctuation, and choice of words. In a controlled writing task, it can be divided into several components, such as: grammar, mechanics, and word choices. classification of writing assignments in controlled writing is as follows: additions, answer questions, dictation, cloze tests, summary writing, conversions, random paragraphs, sentence sequences, concatenation of sentences, and fill in blank parts; (2) A translation is a translation of something written or spoken in one language with words from different languages. Task translation, allows for several components, such as: grammar, mechanics, and word choices. There are two classifications of translation in writing assignments in the following textbooks: direct translation of entire sentences and fill in the blank with translation; and (3) allow several languages, such as: grammar, mechanics, and word choices.

Textbooks are one type of text, a book to be used in the education curriculum (Brown, 2001). While the analysis refers to the process that leads to an objective and verifiable description (McGrath, 2002).

Thus, textbook analysis can be defined as a thorough investigation of the textbook using several types of evaluation procedures that are consistent to identify certain strengths and weaknesses in the textbooks that have been used (Sheldon, 1988, in Lawrence, 2011).

According to Thomson (2000) in Sholichatun (2011: 10) "textbooks are stimulus or instruments for teaching and learning". Textbooks are the center of discussion and one of the most important in what is happening in class
